Experiences of Individuals on Waiting Lists

- It is difficult to measure unmet need and compare waiting lists across states
 - Not all states screen for eligibility before placing people on waiting lists
- Many individuals may be receiving some Medicaid services while waiting for waiver services
 - Tiered waivers
 - State plan services
 - Early and periodic screening, diagnostic, and treatment benefit
- Many individuals have natural supports, such as family caregivers, who provide care
- Some individuals may enter institutions or have supports available from other sources such as schools

Strategies to Reduce or Eliminate Waiting Lists

- State funding and prioritization of HCBS by the governor or state legislature largely influence waiting list size
- Stakeholder views differed on whether state adoption of managed long-term services and supports affects waiting lists
- Some stakeholders spoke about the potential of making HCBS a mandatory benefit

Growing Need for HCBS

- Many states are experiencing or anticipating a growing need for waiver services
 - Concerns about state capacity
 - Increasing demand for HCBS waiver services for children in some states
- Increasing lifespan and service intensity affect states' ability to meet the needs of individuals with intellectual and developmental disabilities
- Provider capacity can be a limiting factor

Policy Considerations

- How can state efforts to rebalance be further encouraged and supported?
- Should there be fundamental changes in Medicaid long-term services and supports (LTSS) policies?
 - Make HCBS a mandatory Medicaid benefit?
 - Different policies for different subpopulations of LTSS users?
